American Prisoners of the Revolution: Names of 8000 Men The British used the ships at Wallabout Bay, later the site of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, for naval prisoners on this side of the Atlantic. The prisoners included men captured on American privateers, merchant ships, French, Spanish, and Dutch vessels.

American Prisoners of the Revolution Names of 8000 Men ...

Colonial American captives aboard Britain's horrific prison ships cried, starved, and prayed for death as England refused to recognize them as prisoners of war. The routine was grim for the American prisoners manning the oars; guarded by British soldiers, they rowed through the armada in Brooklyn's Wallabout Bay, although nothing in the flotilla resembled a genuine ship— Whitby, John, Glasgow, Preston, Stromboli, Felicity, Scheldt, Bristol Packet and other vessels had been stripped ...
