Black Tulips The Selected Poems

Dreams are "black tulips," flowers that grow fantastically in the darkness, and that are interrupted by the violence of morning light. This poem is a marked experimentation with surrealist dream states, yet it still stems from the natural imagery that inspires Hinojosa's earliest poems.

Black Tulips: The Selected Poems of José María Hinojosa ...

'Contempt for flowers is an offence against God. The lovelier the flower, the greater the offence in despising it. The tulip is the loveliest of all flowers. So whoever despised the tulip offends God immeasurably.' In 1672, Cornelius and Johan de Witt, brothers and prominent citizens of Holland were charged with treason and sentenced to...

A deceptively simple story and the shortest of Dumas's most famous novels, The Black Tulip (1850) weaves historical events surrounding a brutal murder into a tale of romantic love.

The Black Tulip - Alexandre Dumas - Oxford University Press

There I saw one Black Tulip, standing alone and firm... My admiration is attracted by this one Black Tulip realm... And I remember one phrase instantly, as I became aware and suddenly in a strange land: "One, extraordinary thing will come to bring you back home, into your land..." And this scent of the Black Tulip brought me back home.

The Black Tulip - Wikipedia

"Tulips" is not a cheerful poem, but it does move from cold to warmth, from numbness to love, from empty whiteness to vivid redness, in a process manipulated by the associative imagination. The speaker herself seems surprised by her own gifts and ends the poem on a tentative note, moving toward the far-away country of health.
