The Blue Djinn wants Philippa to be her heir; the longer Philippa stays in the Blue Djinn's magical home, the more cold-hearted and logical she becomes. Now John must travel a dangerous road to Babylon in modern-day, war-torn Iraq to rescue his sister. With this second book in the Children of the Lamp series, P.B. Kerr has demonstrated that the series has what it takes to become a children's classic. The children are immensely likeable, as are their parents.
