Realism is not well placed to explain the international human rights regime, and at least in their role of interpreters of global politics, realists will not become human rights activists unless they stop being realist first. However, this paper has argued that there are areas of potential strategic interaction between human rights and realism.

Realism: Human Rights Foe?

In this Article, Professor Laurence Burgogues-Larsen, a renowned scholar in European and Latin-American law, explores flaws in the process by which members are appointed to the Inter-American Commission and Court of human rights, respectively. Seeking to strike a balance between "Idealism" and "Realism," Burgogues-Larsen seeks methods for improving the independence and impartiality of the ...
