If CD playback seems to take up processor time in Windows the reason is the playback program which constantly ask from CD-ROM the current playing position and updates it to screen, the audio playback does not take any CPU processing power at all. CD-ROM drives have typically a headphone connector with volume control in the front panel.

The Panorama 2 marks Bowers & Wilkins second attempt at a premium soundbar. We didn't really bond with the original B&W Panorama - the level of sound quality and specification (notably the lack of any HDMI inputs) just didn't reach the standards we expect from such a highly respected brand.. B&W Panorama 2: design. This version's design and build quality are pretty much faultless.
