Decomposition is the process by which dead organic substances are broken down into simpler organic or inorganic matter such as carbon dioxide, water, simple sugars and mineral salts. The process is a part of the nutrient cycle and is essential for recycling the finite matter that occupies physical space in the biosphere. Bodies of living organisms begin to decompose shortly after death.

The rule of thumb is the Single Responsibility Principle. Every unit of code should be responsible for exactly one thing. That applies to methods as well as classes. If you can put a simple, concise name to what each of your many private methods are for, then it's fine. If you can only describe it as "part of" a larger operation, then it probably shouldn't be a separate method.
