The Jungle of Peril is literally brimming with predators, leading to much harsher natural selection than normal. Attacks here are always very swift, coming from the land, the air, and even underground, and the attacks themselves are magical, physical, or both. Surviving here is all but impossible for normal humans.

The Jungle of Peril by Patrick Burston

The jungle of perils is a large region north of Felarya, past the Jadong lake. When you enter the Jungle of Perils, you immediately know it. All the vegetation of this place is of a bright crimson, as most of its inhabitants. This jungle is probably one of the few places in universe where you can find so many different tones of red.

Tarzan's Peril is a 1951 film directed by Byron Haskin and starring Lex Barker as Tarzan and Virginia Huston as Jane, and featuring Dorothy Dandridge as "Melmendi, Queen of the Ashuba." Some of it was shot in Kenya, making it the first Tarzan film to be filmed in Africa, though the majority of its location shooting was done in the United States. Critics praised the convincing integration of the African and American footage. The film is frequently shown under the alternate titles Jungle Queen and
