Next to the bassoon (another double-reed instrument) the oboe has the second most difficult fingering system among band instruments. Oboe students often learn the notes of their Concert B-Flat scale well enough, but struggle with other notes that include less common accidentals and notes in the upper and lower ranges of the instrument.

A properly executed fast trill is an amazing effect but like all fast playing you must learn to play it beautifully slowly then gradually increase its speed but maintaining its quality. To this end, there is little merit in moving your fingers around, for example the first finger of your left hand on the 1st valve whilst the first finger of ...

A double trill involves alternating between the two possible fingerings to create a very fast trill, which is generally used only when specifically asked for, as it does not sound like a regular classical trill. It takes some practice to perform these evenly. Double trill fingering charts can be found in The Oboe Unbound.
