Present Shock: When Everything Happens Now by Douglas Rushkoff

Present Shock: When Everything Happens Now is a non-fiction work written by Douglas Rushkoff and published in 2013. The book introduces the concept of present shock, a state of anxiety in which people all live in as they try to keep up with the ever increasing speed and immediacy of time. The instantaneous nature of digital technology has shaped the way humanity perceives and deals with time. According to Rushkoff, rather than focusing on building a better future, society is primarily concerned

What is the Present Shock? The present shock is an idea developed by Douglas Rushkoff, a professor at the University of New York. He describes it as a potentially burdensome and even paralyzing mental state in which we get stuck in the present, losing many of the connection points with the future and the past.

Present Shock: Living in a world without history or future

The frantic attempt to respond to all this everything creates what Douglas Rushkoff has dubbed "present shock," a condition in which we're assaulted by a present that we ceaselessly grasp to obtain and never quite live in. Not entirely opposed to our technologies, Rushkoff questions how they can better complement our basic rhythms of presence.
