Rationality And The Reflective Mind

In Rationality and the Reflective Mind, Keith Stanovich attempts to resolve the Great Rationality Debate in cognitive science--the debate about how much irrationality to ascribe to human cognition. He shows how the insights of dual-process theory and evolutionary psychology can be combined to explain why humans are sometimes irrational even though they possess remarkably adaptive cognitive machinery.

The reflective mind and the algorithmic mind both have a key function that serves to support human rationality. Both functions relate to an aspect of reasoning that has received considerable attention in parts of the dual-process literature—hypothetical thinking (Evans, 2003, 2006b, 2007, this volume; Evans and Over, 1996, 2004).
