Successful litigation is the key to resolving international commercial disputes and protecting the rights and interests of the parties involved. International and transnational litigation often involves difficult legal procedures because of the number of parties and laws intertwined in the process and the difficulty of enforcing judgments and awards when they are actually obtained.

Transnational and International Litigation

International litigation, sometimes called transnational litigation, is the practice of litigation in connection with disputes among businesses or individuals residing or based in different countries. The main difference between international litigation and domestic litigation is that, in the former, certain issues are more likely to be of significance — such as personal jurisdiction, service of process, evidence from abroad, and enforcement of judgments.
